Evenings on Olas Altas - The blossoming of the Olas Altas area has been one of the most conspicuous changes in gay Vallarta over the past 5 years. On Olas Altas things get going much earlier than the working or going on before midnight myth suggests.
Starting in the south end of the area in Guelbo, a quieter and intimate place usually featuring background jazz music to a nice art-deco setting, with an occasional live music show. The Pulse, a video bar, is among the more successful of the new places in the Olas Altas area. They usually have shows earlier on the evening that get things going and the concert-waiters to keep it fun. Next door to The Pulse is a new small bar called Somo 22, a great place to take a breather while at The Pulse. Apaches is a small side-walk café of a market bar right in the middle of gay Vallarta's traffic pattern. So here for a while and you'll meet and see everyone as they walk down Olas Altas street. Some Barbare, near the north end of Olas Altas, is a result of a restaurant that's had, but the lower level of this gay-oriented place is busy with an eclectic mix of dinner theater, cabaret, karaoke and a mixed version of gay bingo.
North of the Olas Altas area, close to the river are Le Rocher, a cosmopolitan bar lounge, Leo designed an sophisticated gay cantina, and a nice new place called Kilo's, a stylish English Cantina.
Late Night Places - Vallarta's most established discoteque to dominate the late evening scene. Generally they have business-to-entertainment into the night.
Near the Zócalo, or our town square, is Leo Balcones, Vallarta's oldest gay bar. Long known for their current music and hot shows, Balcones is busy from their first show at 11 pm until closing at 4 am.
Antipology is a three-level disco bar with shows, dancing, and a relaxing spot on the rooftop overlooking the river. They gear up for their supper shows at 11:30 with the typical early evening drink specials, but what is unusual here is how they bring back the drink specials after 1 am until their closing at 4 am.
Chasing Down the Night - Club Pavo Pavo, by nature of their 8 am liquor license, tends to peak on the other places are closing and is usually where the after 1 am crowd will end up. This big place has a back bar named The Ranch, which has its own separate entrance next to Leo Antipolo Bar. Going into either Club Pavo Pavo or The Ranch means paying the cover charge for both. Sadly, founder Pavo Pavo was recently forced out and he is using the new straight management over trademark infringement. Missing Pavo, the place just isn't the same anymore.
